

Last issue of the semester!

Seniors' farewell: Page 3
Editor in chief's farewell: Page 7

Index

News.....	1
Gull Life	3
Editorial	7
Sports.....	9

THE FLYER

Vol. 38, Issue 24

Salisbury University's Student Voice

May 10, 2011

Gulls victorious in War on the Shore

Salisbury's Sam Bradman (12) scores against Washington College goaltender Peter Stewart (2) during the War on the Shore matchup May 7. Bradman scored 3 of SU's 17 goals, bringing the final score to 17-3.

Justin Odendhal photo

Three retail properties announced for Sea Gull Square

Less than four months until the building's first residents can move in

By Bianca Makle
Staff Writer
Bm70229@gulls.salisbury.edu

Students can move into the newest residence hall, Sea Gull Square, on August 27. Sea Gull Square has five stories and will be home to 601 students.

"Sea Gull Square is going to be a great place for students to live and a great addition to the SU community," said Associate Director for Housing and Residence Life Roger Becks. "As we open the Perdue School this will also be a great addition to the campus itself. For the Fall 2011 semester, the opening will be a really grand one for SU as a whole."

Vice President of Sea Gull Square Development Blair Rinnier announced three of the businesses that will be located on the first floor of Sea Gull Square.

He said Roly Poly, a place to get wraps, RedBrick Pizza and Pemberton Apothecary are opening up shop as part of the building. Pemberton Apothecary, Rinnier said, is a pharmacy that is also a gift and retail store partnered with Salisbury University.

Sea Gull Square is comprised of fully furnished apartments; most of them have four bedrooms and two bathrooms. The leases are 12-month commitments, and it costs $675 per month. The rate includes utilities, cable and Internet. It took $45 million to build the housing and retail structure.

Junior Justin Taylor chose to live in Sea Gull Square because it was the next best thing to living in another on-campus residence hall.

He said he missed the chance to sign up for the other residence halls and had to choose between Sea Gull Square and off-campus housing.

"Sea Gull Square appeared to be the best choice and a little more cost efficient," he said.

Sea Gull Square will have 12 resident assistants, a resident director and an area director. It will feature a workout room with spin bikes, elliptical machines and four big screen TVs. Additionally, there will be a quiet study room where students can work. There will be a classroom on the first floor, and wireless Internet will be available.

See SQUARE Pg. 2

Bike theft at SU continues

By Alexis Johnson
Staff Writer
Aj72006@gulls.salisbury.edu

"It's not just this year, it's every year," said University Police Corporal Cinda Howell.

She said 19 bikes were reported stolen during the Fall 2010 semester. This semester, there have 14 bike thefts reported to University Police. Howell said three bikes were stolen outside of the library around 8 p.m. in a single night.

Bikes are usually stolen in the early evening through the early morning hours, she said. The thieves vary in description.

"It could be a student who was too lazy to walk or it can be juveniles in the surrounding community," Howell said.

She recommends students lock the frame of their bikes with a U-lock. Students should report the theft of their bike right away and register a serial number to their bike with Parking Services so police can identify it if found.

Chris Barton, a former SU student, had his bike stolen from the bike rack outside of The Commons in Fall 2010. He said he had the bike "fake locked."

"I had a lock wrapped around it but not actually secured very well," Barton said.

Barton said he had used this method with his bike two other times and didn't think anyone would take it during the hour he was in The Commons.

"I thought if it looked like it was locked up, no one would take it," he

See BIKES Pg. 2

Dr. Bond to judge Hans Christian Andersen Awards

Dr. Ernie Bond

NEWS BRIEF

Dr. Ernie Bond, co-chair of Salisbury University's teacher education department, has been chosen to represent the United States on the 10-person jury for the 2012 Hans Christian Andersen Awards, which celebrate children's authors and illustrators. According to a news release from the International Board on Books for Young People, which sponsors the event, the other nine jurors are from Russia, France, Austria, Turkey, Sweden, Greece, Argentina, Iran and Brazil. The Jury President is María Jesús Gil, from Spain. The Queen of Denmark is the patron of this award, Bond said.

Bond also served on the jury for the Hans Christian Andersen award in 2010. He said he plans to read about 600 books during the judging process, between the author and illustrator categories.

Winners are not chosen just based on one book, Bond said, but based on all the work that is submitted for that author or illustrator.

He said he will read the books at home and converse with the other judges using an online discussion board. The judges will meet for two to three days until the winners are announced at the Bologna Book Festival in Spring 2012. The awards will then be given during the fall in London, Bond said.

- Vanessa Junkin

Patrick Hackley photo

Construction continues on the Sea Gull Square building, which will open for student residents August 27.

Adrienne Price photo

Amy Moon, Dylan Hartmann and Jamie Smith plant flowers on Booth Street as part of their social work project for the semester.

Salisbury seniors beautify Booth Street

By Amina Aden
Staff Writer
Aa34943@gulls.salisbury.edu

As a part of a Social Work macro course, Salisbury University seniors Amy Wood, Dylan Hartmann and Jamie Smith set off to a park along Booth Street with their community change project.

"As seniors, we must complete a macro community project that involves us doing something that will help us express our social work skills we have learned over the last four years," Hartmann said. "We basically just rebuilt Booth Street as our project, but through Campus Crusade for Christ, we have gotten to get to know the kids in the community and incorporate them into our project."

The course description defined the requirements, requiring students to "expand basic knowledge, values, ethics and skills, with emphasis on macro level problem solving and problem advocacy."

Booth Street, located three and a half miles or approximately nine minutes away from SU's campus, is part of government housing. Wood said she chose Booth Street because "the piece of

"It was a great way to finish senior year... knowing that after all these years of sitting in the classroom... something's paid off and we can put our learning into practice."

- Amy Wood, senior land that we chose sits between the nursing home and Leonard Apartments and belongs to the apartments. It was filled with trash, rotting furniture, old TVs and more trash."

Booth Street was also previously mentioned through Salisbury University's Campus Crusade for Christ, which did a mentoring project for kids from Booth Street.

"There are many children in the community, and we felt they need a safe place to play and to put an end to the negative activity happening there," Hartmann said. "We were hoping to create a safe, drug-free location that the local Booth Street kids and families could spend their time outdoors, away from the dangers and apparent drug use in the community."

Students in the social work macro class broke into small teams and chose a community or organizational project inspired by the class readings, lectures and professional or personal experiences. Hartmann, Smith, and Wood focused on Booth Street rather than their initial plan to have a clothing drive. Resources were provided through donations from Ace Hardware, local flower stores and friends. With these resources, the students cleared out a wooded area of trash, brush and fallen trees, and they transformed the place with benches, a birdbath, flowers, a brick pathway and decorative stones.

"Some of the area kids helped paint and personalize benches," Wood said. "They'll feel some ownership, comfort in and respect for the park."

Hartmann said the project was a way to practice what is taught in the classroom in real life.

"Our professor, Eileen Gilheany, has done lots of community projects in Salisbury and around the state, so she has taught us a lot," Hartmann said.

The renovations and hard work can be seen on Booth Street.

"Kids have already been over there, playing, saying that there's too many 'big kids' at the other park," Wood said. "It was a great way to finish senior year... knowing that after all these years of sitting in the classroom and hearing lecture after lecture, that something's paid off and we can put our learning into practice."

Briefly Stated

News Briefs

Professor Nancy Mitchell's poetry workshop student Tim Lynch and Lauren Wolf will be published in the Githon Review out of Johnson State College in Vermont.

SU senior Patrick Gotham, a marketing and management major, has been chosen as winner of The New York Intern Project against 95 other applicants. This summer, he will be completing a paid public relations, marketing and social media summer internship at Affect Strategies in New York City. The New York Intern Project was powered by Strutta's Contest Builder platform, which allows companies to create a promotion where users participate by uploading content such as videos, photos, audio or text. This format allows for easy sharing and voting.

Tuesday, May 10

Vocal Jazz Ensemble
SU's "Memorable Melodies" spring music festival continues with the Vocal Jazz Ensemble at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, May 10 in Holloway Hall Auditorium. Conducted by William Folger, its program includes standards such as "Misty," "All of Me" and "Voice Dance." Solo sections will be performed by students, faculty and guest artists. Sponsored by the Department of Music, admission is free and the public is invited. For information call 410-543-6385.

Friday, May 13

Exploration & First Contact Delmarva, 1600-1700 Exhibit

Nabb Center Gallery presents an exhibit featuring Native Americans' first contact with Europeans and the profound change and the landscape in which they lived from 1-4 p.m. on Friday, May 13. The maps, artifacts and documents reveal the early contact period of exploration by Europeans and illustrate their subsequent domination of the Eastern Shore. Admission is free and the public is invited. For information call 410-543-6312.

Friday, May 13

The Eastern Shore Through the Eye of the Photographer
From 1-4 p.m. on Friday, May 13, the Nabb Center presents a reprisal of the national-award winning exhibit of images of the Eastern Shore shot by its most famous photographer, Orlando Wooten, whose extensive collection is among the Nabb Center's holdings. The exhibit is enhanced with images not previously shown. For information call 410-543-6312.

Ongoing- Wednesday, May 25

Pastels, Paints and Photographs exhibit

Artium Gallery hours: Mon.-Wed: 10 a.m.-4 p.m.
This statewide exhibition features outsider art created by individuals who have had little or no formal art instruction. All these works were created by mental health consumers and individuals with other disabilities from inpatient or community-based consumer/rehabilitative programs under the jurisdiction of the Maryland Department of Health and Mental Hygiene. The exhibition is organized by the Eastern Shore Hospital Center's Volunteer Services Department and is supported by a grant from the Maryland State Arts Council, the National Endowment for the Arts and the University Galleries. Admission is free and the public is invited. For information call 410-548-2547 or visit the SU Web site at www.salisbury.edu.

Thursday, May 19

Graduation
Salisbury University graduates its largest class — 1,539 students — on Thursday, May 19 at the Wicomico Youth and Civic Center. Elementary education major Laura Oakley of Somers, N.Y. will speak at the 10 a.m. ceremony for Perdue and Seidel School graduates. Political science and history major Bobby Audley of Liverpool, N.Y., will speak at the 2 p.m. ceremony for Fulton and Henson School graduates. Admission to Commencement is by ticket only. A reception at the Civic Center follows each ceremony. For more information call 410-543-6030 or visit the SU Web site at www.salisbury.edu.

CLASSIFIED AD

SUMMER WORK COLLEGE STUDENTS & 2011 HS Grads Welcome
$15 base-appt, FT/PT schedules, sales/svc, no exp nec, all ages 17+, conditions apply, 410-202-8338

Students help local children through Sheila's Kids

By Ashley Wilson
Staff Writer
Aw79907@gulls.salisbury.edu

Inspiration and enthusiasm fill the Scarborough Student Leadership Center every week for Sheila's Kids, a mentoring program. Volunteers inspire youth to grow, feel enthusiastic about life and have a good education. They also encourage the kids to never give up trying to achieve their goals and desires.

Salisbury University students and alumni come together every Tuesday evening with local children to dedicate their time and energy to helping these kids succeed.

For students like graduating senior Archelle Harrison, volunteering for mentoring programs like Sheila's Kids gives them the experience they need in order to fulfill academic requirements. Harrison started with the Sheila's Kids program after her professor told her she needed to work on a community service project for her class. She and fellow senior classmate Angel Simpson began to volunteer with the Sheila's Kids program.

Prior to their community service project, Simpson had already been a part of the Sheila's Kids mentoring program, and Harrison used to be a mentor for the Wicomico Mentoring Project.

"While participating in the Sheila's Kids mentoring program, I found my time to be very enjoyable and well spent, not to mention the fact that the other members of the program were very friendly," Harrison said.

Sheila's Kids started about two years ago and was inspired by an organization that was sponsored by the Ministry of Soul Discovery

Adrienne Price photo

Children gather at Sheila's Kids, a mentoring program held at the Scarborough Student Leadership Center, on Tuesday, April 26.

Church, called Kid's Café, which has since ended. In essence, Sheila's Kids simply took over what Kid's Café started and took the time to solve more problems," Osborne said.

Nicole Osborne, the assistant director of Sheila's Kids, believes that one should target not only the child but also their families, "because if you try to help the whole family you solve more problems," Osborne said.

Angelica Baez has been a part of Sheila's Kids for about a year and a half, and her mentor, SU alumnus Ashley Jackson, has been with Baez since the beginning. The pair has developed a close bond because they have been working together for so long. Baez said she enjoys talking to her mentor, and when she needs help with work, projects or any other issues, Jackson is there for her. Baez said she likes attending Sheila's Kids, and her three little brothers who also attend every week are never too far away from her.

Sheila's Kids hosts dinners for the kids that allow them to eat and converse at the table that generally lead to laughter and happiness. Games follow dinner.

Melany Trenary, the director of Sheila's Kids, said she believes this program makes a difference in these children's lives and does her best to keep the program running. Trenary and Osborne sometimes even use their own money to pay for things that the children or the organization needs.

"The funding would be used for supplies and to rent out spaces so that they can continue to have their weekly meetings," Trenary said.

Trenary said she believes as long as the program continues to receive funding and volunteers, the Sheila's Kids mentoring program will continue to grow and mature.

Crime Beat

5/1/11
1:30 a.m. - 1:45 a.m.
Disorderly Conduct
A Chester Hall Resident Assistant reported a disruptive student inside the building. The student reportedly maliciously damaged the Chester Hall exterior door and a police vehicle. Criminal charges are pending against the student.

5/2/11
9 p.m. - 9 a.m.
Theft
Student reported the theft of a motor scooter from the west St. Martin bicycle rack.

5/2/11
11:50 a.m. - 8:30 p.m.
Theft
Student reported the theft of his personal belonging from his unsecured room in Chesapeake Hall.

5/3/11
5 p.m. - 10 p.m.
Telephone Harassment
Student reported receiving unwanted telephone calls from an unknown subject.

5/4/11
3 p.m. - 3:30 p.m.
Sexual Assault (Off-Campus)
Student reported she was sexually assaulted by an acquaintance at an off campus location. The case is currently under investigation by another police agency.

Square

Continued from Pg. 1

throughout the building.
"I chose to live there next year because I wanted an apartment but also to be close to campus," said junior Charles Martin.

Sea Gull Square will be open to transfer students.

"All of Sea Gull Square will have the electronic locks, so residents will need to carry their ID with them at all times," Beck's said. "That will be their access to not only the building but their apartment and into their room. Each individual bedroom will have its own programmable lock as well."

The Housing and Residence Life office is not accepting any more applications at the moment because all spots have been filled.

Students interested in applying to live in Sea Gull Square in the future can go to the Housing and Residence Life webpage on the SU website for more information.

Patrick Hackley photo

During the 2010-2011 school year, 33 bikes have been reported stolen, according to Corp. Cinda Howell

Bike barn locations

Dogwood Village
Between Chester and Choptank
Manokin (there is also a video camera here)

Free online bike registration

<http://www.salisbury.edu/police/registration.asp>

Bikes

Continued from Pg. 1

Junior Vicky Kutch said she knows a few people who have had their bikes stolen from campus. She said she locks her bike with a code lock and feels it is safe.

"I don't worry about it," Kutch said.
Nate Williams said he has had three bikes stolen during his time at SU. The senior said all three bikes were locked on the St. Martin bike rack. Last semester, his second bike was stolen.

"I was livid," Williams said.
About two months after his second bike was stolen, he said he saw a younger kid riding the bike through Red Square. Williams said he confronted and chased him but was unable to get his bike back. He said he thinks the bike thieves primarily come from James M. Bennett High School because it's the closest high school to SU.

"The majority of the people who would want a bike are high school kids," Williams said.

He said the bookstore should sell U-locks so they are readily available to students and that there should be better lighting near all the bike racks so that students at SU can see if anyone is trying to steal a bike.

"Usually when the kids come get them, it's 1, 2 or 3 in the morning," Williams said.

Howell suggested students park their bikes in bike barns because they are well lit. She said University Police need students' help to stop bike thefts.

"We want students to report it if they see something suspicious," Howell said.

"Books that Bind" campaign promotes literacy

By Steven Graves
Staff Writer
Sg73756@gulls.salisbury.edu

A social work macro class at Salisbury University is spreading literacy to those who need it most. "Books that Bind" raised funds to make children's books available to foster families in the Salisbury area.

The idea for the campaign was derived from master of social work students Reggie Brice, Nikki Dyer, Melba Malpass and Maria Stewart. The group named themselves "Agents 4 Change," as they hoped to make an impact in the lives of these foster families.

The group decided to donate books and money to the Foster Parents Association of Somerset and Wicomico Counties, a non-profit organization that comes together to offer help local foster parents and children. FPA holds meetings for foster parents to come together and discuss legal issues that impact the rights of their foster children and discuss new laws that come into effect, Dyer said.

"Foster parenting is very rewarding, but there is a lot to it," Dyer said. "The (FPA) does not have a lot of time to do any fundraising, so we decided to help."

The Agents 4 Change researched information on foster parents and children to better understand their cause. One of the group's findings was that foster children were not as literate as other students.

"We found that as these foster children were moved from school to school, they did not have a consistent educational environment, which resulted in low literacy levels," Dyer said.

Some of the books given to the foster families were donated by family and friends of the social work students and others were bought from a company called Barefoot Books. Malpass was familiar with Barefoot Books prior to their assignment and contacted them for their campaign.

Customers either ordered books for themselves or for the foster families. Barefoot Books agreed to give the group 50 percent of the sales they made. The group also accepted monetary donations to go toward the FPA.

Their efforts in raising money and getting books for the foster children were not in vain. The Agents 4 Change sold $1,370.92 worth of books, raising $765.00 to give to the FPA, Dyer said. She added the group will additionally donate over 200 new and gently used books to the FPA.

"We were skeptical to ask for money from people at first because of the economy," Dyer said. "We were surprised to find that people were so generous in their giving and we were very grateful for that."

The FPA plans to use the donated funds to hold programs for the local foster parents and also donate the books to foster families to promote literacy, Dyer said.

Inside Saferide

Kristina Jackereas
Staff Writer
Kj94017@gulls.salisbury.edu

After spending a night inside of a Saferide van on Cinco de Mayo, I realized that Saferide drivers handle their job, driving a van full of crazy students who have been drinking, very well. Spending the evening in the van allowed me to gain quite a different perspective. I felt as if I was actually a part of the staff, watching and witnessing the insanity of a student's night out.

"I think Saferide is unique because it is student-run," said one of Saferide's advisors, Dr. Heather Holmes. Holmes said approximately 10 Saferide team leaders manage 60 student drivers, dispatchers and riders to help students get home safely.

Saferide president Alex Rice explained that Saferide transfers all students, no matter how intoxicated.

"We help Salisbury by giving the community a better image of the students, and (we) keep them safe and off the roads," he said.

At the Celebration of University Leadership on May 6, Saferide took the honor for Outstanding RSO and Alex Rice was chosen as the Outstanding RSO President.

Junior Danielle Sersen and sophomore Marina DiMattia drove a van on Thursday night.

Thursdays are usually slow, but Cinco de Mayo can be a wild night for students, so the van was packed.

"We usually have three vans running on Thursdays and four running on Fridays and Saturdays," Sersen said. "We get up to 100 to 200 calls per night, and most pick-ups range around the New Zoo/Old Zoo and UP/UV areas."

The girls talked about their biggest pet peeves while driving, along with their crazy experiences.

"It's hard to keep pick-ups quick when we arrive somewhere and we have to wait or the people never come out," DiMattia said. The girls agreed they didn't find camera flashes distracting; however, yelling and acting "picky" toward the drivers gets hard to handle.

The drivers also said that change of destination is a constant issue.

"When we arrive somewhere and students tell us that they would suddenly rather go somewhere else, it makes our job stressful," Sersen said.

While many students were polite to the drivers, many failed to give the girls a simple "thank you."

Kristina Jackereas photo

A Saferide van makes its way around Salisbury on Cinco de Mayo. The student-run organization transports students during late nights.

However, that's not the worst that Sersen and DiMattia have seen.

"I dropped a group of students off and about two minutes later they came sprinting back to my van," Sersen said. "The students kicked a window in at a house that wouldn't let them join the party. Once they came back to me, the owner of the house called the police and I had to wait until everything was sorted out. My van was out of service for a good 30 minutes. It was definitely crazy."

Not all students are bad passengers, though.

DiMattia has seen a few students getting sick in the van, but admitted how other students were nothing short of considerate.

"A girl got sick in my van, and two guys stayed behind and helped to clean it up," she said. "It was so nice of them, especially since I would have had to clean that later on."

Movies so bad, they're good

By Christopher MacDonald
Staff Writer
Cm62045@gulls.salisbury.edu

As the summer rapidly approaches, students will find more time on their hands than usual. Why not watch a good flick? Better yet why not watch a flick that's so bad, it's good? This is a list of the top five best worst movies ever created. A generation that grew up on "Mystery Science Theater 3000" can surely appreciate these little cinematic disasters.

1. "Troll 2"
This is the Deer Hunter of flop films. "Troll 2" not only has nothing to do with the previous film, but it has nothing to do with trolls. In this film, a suburban family makes their way to Nilbog for a quiet vacation in the countryside. Nilbog is not just any small country town; it is inhabited by vegetarian goblins (Nilbog cleverly spells goblin backwards). These goblins will stop at nothing to eat this family, yet in order to eat them, the goblins must transform the humans into plant matter. This can only be accomplished by feeding them a powerful, green slime. Luckily for the family, the son, Joshua, has telepathic powers that summon his Grandpa Seth.

His grandfather has some choice advice throughout the movie, making Grandpa Seth the breakout star. One key scene is when Grandpa Seth manages to freeze time, and Joshua must stop his family from eating their dinner, which is laced with the slime. What Joshua does is nothing short of pure genius, but you'll have to see the film. The movie is in fact so strange that a documentary was made to honor it, and has grown quite a following.

2. "Dead Alive"
Probably one of the best films to come out of New Zealand, "Dead Alive" offers a unique commentary on love, zoology, and zombies. In this kiwi classic, a rare type of primate is discovered, the Sumatran rat-monkey. It bites the protagonist, Lionel Cosgrove's, mother, who enters a feverish metamorphosis into a flesh-eating zombie. Perhaps stranger than a rat primate spreading a zombie virus is that Lionel tries to keep the zombies in his home and care for them until some unexpected party guests ruin everything. Even though this film is from the early nineties and is plagued with cheesy effects, it is not for the faint of heart.

3. "Leprechaun: Back 2 The Hood"
The Leprechaun series is shrouded in mystery. It is unknown if these movies are intended to be hilarious or if it is just circumstantial. "Back 2 The Hood" is undoubtedly the best of the series. An evil leprechaun returns from hell to kill a hairdresser and her friends who stumbled upon his treasure. The film is packed with hilarious limericks and forgettable quotes.

4. "The Graduate"
This local gem is about some high school seniors who embark on the beloved Maryland pastime that is 'beach week,' in Ocean City. This film is worth a watch for two reasons: the local Eastern Shore flavor, and Mike Pennacchio who plays Nickie.

The odd commentary and mannerisms by an eyebrow-less Pennacchio ensured that his first movie would be his last. This movie has a strange existence in that nothing happens and there is no resolution, it just simply is.

5. "Santa with Muscles"
Hulk Hogan has made his way into the hearts and minds of every American, so why shouldn't he play Santa Claus? In this unforgetable holiday classic, Hogan plays a bad boy turned good by the joy of Christmas. Well, actually he suffers massive head trauma, making him think he is Santa Claus. And what would any good Saint Nick impersonator do? Clean up the streets! This movie is worth a watch for the great dialogue, witty puns, and heart stopping action.

Congratulations to The Flyer grads!

Kristen Etzel, Advertising Manager

The past year and a half at The Flyer has been a great learning experience selling advertisements. Although it was sometimes stressful I know that I will miss this next year. The past three years at Salisbury have been great and I'm looking forward to my next adventure after graduation.

Alexis Howard, Sports Editor

I have enjoyed my time being Sports Editor for The Flyer. I will miss all the staff at The Flyer and all the girls from the SU Poms Dance Team. I will miss the performances and social events we did together. I have had so many opportunities at Salisbury such as being able to study abroad in India with the Communications department for three weeks and being able to have an internship with a professional sports team. After graduation I hope to pursue a career in journalism and hopefully attend graduate school in the near future.

Adrienne Price, Photography Editor and Graphic Designer

IWRARANAPED. The Flyer has taught me a lot about people and journalism, even though I am/was only the photo editor. Long live journalism and nosy people finding out the truth! I will miss all of the Flyer Angel nights. I will also miss Nikki Dyer. And Rena.

Rachael Stone, Gull Life Editor

Graduating from college is a bittersweet feeling for me. After just three years attending SU (I went to Frostburg my freshman year), I feel that I have made a dramatic impact on the communication arts department. As a writer for The Flyer who was promoted to the Gull Life editor this year, and as the Public Relations Student Society of America president, I have had the privilege of working with a variety of talented individuals within the department. I'd like to thank The Flyer for giving me the opportunity to continue to expand my knowledge of journalism, editing and writing, and PRSSA for giving me a leadership position to educate members and peers about the ever-changing trends in public relations.

For CMAT majors in the journalism and public relations track: If you aren't a staff writer or photographer for The Flyer or a member of PRSSA, you better become one next semester. The best advice I can give to anyone is to GET INVOLVED. You won't regret it.

This local gem is about some high school seniors who embark on the beloved Maryland pas-

Kelly Mundle, Copy Editor

Although I jumped into my position at The Flyer with no idea what it would be like, I will walk away with a direction for a future career and an interesting view on SU's students. All I can say is, please start to care more about what is going on around you, Sea Gulls! It's not without sadness that I leave my job bemoaning you with weekly questions and fixing your mistakes.

Leah Cox, Layout Staff

It has been great working at The Flyer for the past three years. I'm going to miss all of my wonderful co-workers!

Good-bye, Rena!

We have all really enjoyed working with you at The Flyer and we'll miss you so much next year.

Thanks for your four years of service as business manager of The Flyer. You always brightened our days when we came in on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Keep texting - you'll get better eventually!

~ All of The Flyer staff

IN CASE YOU MISSED IT ...

1. The 2011 winner of the Richard Bernstein Award for Excellence for business plans, senior Zack Kline, holds the $5,000 prize next to Dr. Stephen Adams, left, director of the award program, and William Burke, right, chairman of the student development committee. Photo by Todd Dudek/The Daily Times 2. Phi Mu sisters and Habitat for Humanity members wash cars to help raise money for Children's Miracle Network hospitals and SU's Habitat for Humanity Chapter at Sonic in Fruitland on May 6. Lura Herriman photo. 3. Taylor Webb races to a base in one of the Gulls' games against Hood on April 9. The Gulls won the first game 3-0 and the second game 8-0. Justin Odendhal photo. 4. Students perform during Alpha Sigma Tau's Mock Rock 2011 on April 14 in the Wicomico Room. Lura Herriman photo. 5. Senior Andrew Nottage swings for the ball during Salisbury's match against UMES on April 5. Justin Odendhal photo. 6. Students skate on the Dogwood Parking Lot during SOAP's Gulls on Ice on January 25. Justin Odendhal photo. 7. A member of Far East Movement wears a monkey head during Gull Fest, hosted by SOAP on April 10. Justin Odendhal photo. 8. SGA members and students pose in their Stop Hatin' shirts during the week-long campaign, which lasted from March 7 to 11. Matt Goldman photo. 9. Students gather at Wordstock, a celebration of words, in Red Square on May 5. Erin Corcoran photo. 10. Tony Mendes battles against a player from Washington College at War on the Shore on May 7 in Chestertown. Justin Odendhal photo.

11. Students gear up for Bongo Ball, hosted by SOAP on Feb. 20. Erin Corcoran photo. 12. Steven Beck and other students are stuck in the "jail" at Relay for Life on April 29. Matt Goldman photo. 13. An SU baseball player gets his Staten Island opponent out during one of the team's two games on May 6. SU won both games, 3-2 and 11-2. Dan Anderson photo. 14. A student gets henna done during the Henna/Mehndi Party with designer Jumana Bootwala on March 11. Preeda Dulyachinda photo. 15. Mike Posner sings at Gull Fest on April 10. Justin Odendhal photo. 16. Members of SU's Ultimate Frisbee team practice in front of Holloway Hall. Adrienne Price photo. 17. Senior attack Trish DiGirolomo makes her way down the field against her Christopher Newport opponent. The Gulls won the May 7 game, 17-7. Dan Anderson photo. 18. Students from the Asian Pacific Islander Club perform with fans at the Multicultural Showcase on April 26. Jackie Holder photo. 19. On April 19, during Greek Week, players from Sig Tau Gamma and Sigma Epsilon fraternities compete against each other. Patrick Hackley photo. 20. Kappa Sigma brothers form a pyramid during Greek Week on April 18. Patrick Hackley photo. 21. Choreographer Zoey Cruz teaches a group dance moves from Ke$ha's hit song "Take It Off" at the University Fitness Club March 12. Preeda Dulyachinda photo. 22. The crowd cheers for Far East Movement during Gull Fest on the intramural fields. Justin Odendhal photo. 23. A student gets pied in the face at Relay for Life on April 29. Lura Herriman photo. 24. Members of the PACE Presidential Citizen Scholar program sell baked goods at Third Friday on April 15. Adrienne Price photo.

Tyrone Wells sings to students

Kristina Jackereas
Staff Writer
Kj94017@gulls.salisbury.edu

"Sea Breeze," "Wondering Where You Are" and "Need You" were just a few of the original tracks musical artist Tyrone Wells sang May 1 in the Wicomico Room. The acoustic singer, whose music has been featured on TV Shows such as "Grey's Anatomy" and "Rescue Me," brought a large turnout of both students and professors.

At the performance, Wells did a little bit of everything, from playing the guitar and singing a capella to yodeling.

Wells explained that growing up with a father who was a preacher and four older sisters in a music group made it hard not to get into music.

"I got into singing when I was young, and I had a passion for it," he said. "I also started playing the guitar and writing songs in college."

Students enjoyed his quirky musical talents.

"I got an email saying that Tyrone Wells was coming here, and I love acoustic music, so I decided to check him out," said freshman Brie Webster.

Senior Tim Lynch said, "I didn't expect to like him as much as I did. He was lighthearted and had good stage presence."

Wells has a new CD coming out in November featuring his new single, "For Who I Am."

SOAP was honored to bring him to Salisbury.

"We first saw him at (National Association for Campus Activities)," said Telesia Taylor, president of SOAP.

"He had a lot to offer, so we decided to bring him here," Christie Stone, the concert chair of SOAP, also enjoyed his performances.

"His music is so relaxing," she said. "Having him sing here was great because finals are coming up and we all need a break."

Wells said he has enjoyed being on tour, and has had some crazy experiences.

"We sang in an anti-American town overseas in Ecuador," Wells said. "When we were introduced as an American band, the people automatically booed us, and we had to be escorted out with guards. It was definitely an interesting experience."

Aside from the insanity, Wells said he enjoys connecting with his fans on tour and believes there is a little bit of magic in every evening.

"I love the way music makes me feel," he said. "I'm inspired by beauty, struggle, hope, love and God. I hope to continue doing this for a long time."

Adrienne Price photo

Tyrone Wells sings acoustic music to students on May 1 in an event presented by SOAP.

QUOTATION INSPIRATION

By Jonas M. Gottlieb
Staff Writer
Jg15474@gulls.salisbury.edu

"I don't know the key to success, but the key to failure is trying to please everybody."
— Bill Cosby

Seeing that this is the final Quotation Inspiration for this school year, I figured it is a perfect time to provide a closing quote that embodies the many messages this column has provided over the past months.

Being positive and optimistic is crucial to reaching goals and being happy with oneself. Living with these outlooks will provide a much greater chance of doing well than living with negativity or having a neutral perspective on what is possible. But remember, these words are meant to be taken into account as a part of your own personal style of framing the world.

At the end of the day, it is you and only you who makes decisions, puts forth the effort and ultimately fails or succeeds. You are in it with yourself for the long haul; therefore the outcome you hope for is the only thing that matters.

This quote provides a necessary ground rule before any steps are even taken to do or have what you want in your pursuit of happiness. There are a billion unimaginable ways to become successful or wealthy or whatever you want to be in this world. However, there is no special formula or outline of steps to be taken that will lead to a definitive outcome. All that can be done is thinking positively and taking motivated action.

Life is a wild journey in which scenarios unravel unexpectedly. These situations will call for you to make choices out of self-interest. We often hope that the actions can satisfy as many people as possible. However, disappointment from others is inevitable.

When it is all said and done, whether you become successful, or fail miserably, if everything on the journey was done free of the burden of others, there is no one to attribute your outcome to other than the face in the mirror.

College Cravings: Smoker's BBQ Pit

By Chelsea Grimm
Staff Writer
Cg25409@gulls.salisbury.edu

Since we are nearing the end of school and the beginning of summer, I have found myself craving more summer foods. To me, summer is summed up through food by one word: barbecue. I have tried a lot of barbecue, prepared in many different styles and at many different places, but I have never found better barbecue than what they make at Smoker's BBQ Pit.

Smoker's is located at 9711 Stephen Decatur Highway, in West Ocean City. If you are familiar with the West OC area, Stephen Decatur Highway is the road that is across the light from the White Marlin Mall. The establishment is small, providing about eight picnic tables inside a screened-in porch. You can also order food for take out or relax in your car while you eat. Their menu is massive, offering every variety of smoked and barbecued meats you could ever want.

You can choose between chicken, pork, fish and beef fresh out of the smoker and topped with their zesty homemade barbecue sauce. Ribs, fried chicken, burgers, salads, chili, French fries and other items are also offered on the menu, all of which are delicious.

My personal favorite is the classic pulled pork sandwich. I like mine with red sauce, which is a sweeter, tomato-based sauce, and if you're getting a sandwich you must order French fries and sweet tea. The pulled pork is melt in your mouth tender. When you bite into the sandwich, you can tell that the meat has been cooking low and slow for hours. The natural juices of the meat mixed with the rich barbecue sauce fill your mouth with a pure barbecue flavor. A large scoop of the pork is served on a sturdy white bun, and each sandwich runs about $5.

The fries at Smoker's are the best fries I've ever had. They are battered and then fried, so they have an extremely crunchy outer coating and a soft inside.

No matter what menu item you choose at Smoker's, you can be sure that you will not be disappointed, prices are reasonable and the food is outstanding. So with this I hope you all go and give it a try!

SU alum to appear on golf reality show

Can an M.B.A. degree improve a golf game? Salisbury University alumnus Carl Whyte thinks so.

By day, Whyte is the assistant vice president for information technology at Easton Bank and Trust. By night, he was an M.B.A. student in SU's first satellite cohort at the Eastern Shore Higher Education Center in Wye Mills, Md. He graduated from that program in December 2010.

The next month, he put his analytical and managerial skills to use — on the golf course.

The 33-year-old Jamaica native, who lives in Salisbury, was one of 11 competitors selected from thousands of applicants for the Golf Channel's "Big Break Indian Wells," filmed in Indian Wells, Calif. Now in its 15th season, the reality show offers players the chance to compete in a PGA tour event. Whyte will vie for over $50,000 in cash, an exemption into the 2012 Zurich Classic of New Orleans and other prizes.

The premiere is 9:30 p.m. Monday, May 16, and the series will air for nine consecutive weeks at 9 p.m. Mondays.

"Golf is all about managing your mind," Whyte said. "SU's M.B.A. program provided me a better understanding of management in general. As I went through classes, I learned lessons about managing money, individuals and expectations. It gave me an advantage on the show."

This season is different in that players are given cash at the beginning, which they have to manage while competing in challenges each week. They can bet on their own performance or use it to buy extra shots and improve their standing.

"You had to manage your game and understand how to hedge bets so you would be in the best position," he said. "My finance classes were helpful; I learned about hedging and thinking strategically to protect your investments, whether they fail or are successful."

A natural athlete and track star, Whyte represented Jamaica in national and international meets in high school. In 1997, he moved to the U.S. to attend the University of Maryland, Eastern Shore on a track scholarship.

Whyte's home golf course is Nutter's Crossing in Salisbury. For more information on Big Break Indian Wells, visit www.golfchannel.com/bigbreak. To follow Whyte, see www.facebook.com/jamericangolfer or twitter.com/jamericangolfer.

CONGRADULATIONS
CELEBRATION

Music

Food & Drinks

Salisbury
UNIVERSITY

<http://alumni.salisbury.edu>

For All 2011 Graduates

Tuesday, May 10, 2011

Alumni House Garden • 1120 Camden Avenue
5:30-7:30 p.m.

Driver's license required for admission
Sponsored by: SU Alumni Association

Corporate Sponsor: GEICO
www.geico.com

SU's Dr. John Kalb on the air

"Just Folks" broadcasts on Delmarva Public Radio Saturday nights

By Katie Franklin
Staff Writer
Kf67781@gulls.salisbury.edu

Salisbury University professor Dr. John Kalb has been broadcasting his radio show, "Just Folks," on Delmarva Public Radio since December 1991. His show airs weekly on Saturday nights from 8 to 11. Kalb has been at SU since 1989; he teaches Native American Literature, Ethnic Literature in America, and Contemporary American Literature, among other courses.

Kalb made his way onto the radio scene as a volunteer, and his title has not changed in his twenty years at DPR.

Mike Dunn, corporate support director for Delmarva Public Radio, praised Kalb's dedication to the station.

"His show is so popular among the folk audience," Dunn said. "Each year, when we are doing our membership drive, his fans make such solid contributions to our efforts. They clearly love and appreciate John and his talent, as do we."

Kalb said he got the inspiration for the show while he was driving in his native area near Detroit.

"The music I was used to hearing on the radio, on select folk music programs, or hearing in local concert venues didn't seem to exist here on the Shore," he said. "After a couple years of complaining, I decided maybe I should do something about it."

As the name suggests, Kalb plays music that would generally fall into the folk genre.

"I primarily say that I play contemporary folk music, but defining that is not easy to do," he said. "I call the show 'Just Folks' for its ambiguity so that I can play pretty much whatever I want to."

Kalb said that because he is a literature professor, he tends to focus on the lyrics of the songs he plays, but equally values how the songs sound instrumentally. He said that in some ways, a good folk song is comparable to literature in the way that it tells a story.

John Kalb

"In many ways, I think that it's stuff that's written for adults as opposed to rock and roll, which I think is very much an adolescent kind of music," he said. Although a large majority of his show pertains to contemporary folk music, Kalb says he does play different bands, such as the Beatles, on occasion.

One of the things he enjoys most about the show is putting the playlists together.

"I put together the program all day long (Saturday) and then go to the station and play it," Kalb said. "On those occasions when I get the opportunity to maybe put it together on a Thursday, in some ways I get to hear it in a different sort of way." He says when putting together playlists, he goes through new albums he has received, and also threads tracks thematically.

"Sometimes I listen to something, and it reminds me of something else, and I end up threading a whole sort of thematic set together of tunes that are all about this, that or the other thing," Kalb said.

Kalb said he enjoys the works of artists such as Lynn Miles, Jeffrey Foucault, Eliza Gilkyson, Bruce Cockburn, and Alison Krauss and Union Station.

"It's three hours of fantastic music on Saturday nights from 8 until 11 p.m.," he said.

RECYCLE

Your Books For Cash!

Buying and selling used textbooks saves trees and other natural resources.

MONDAY,
MAY 9 thru

WEDNESDAY,
MAY 18

Monday, May 9-Thursday, May 12.....9 a.m.-5:30 p.m.
Friday, May 13.....9 a.m.-3:30 p.m.
Monday, May 16-Wednesday, May 18.....9 a.m.-5:30 p.m.

SU bookstore

Volume 38 Issue 24

EDITORIAL

May 10, 2011

Overheard: What is your biggest accomplishment this school year?

Photos and article by Adrienne Price and Kelly Mundle

"I figured out my place and learned to balance my responsibilities."
—Natasha Shangold, freshman

"Having above a 3.5 GPA."
—Jeff Myers, junior

"Getting the best grades of my college career—a 3.5!"
—Alex Akinseye, junior

"Managing to get all my work done amidst all the distractions."
—Samantha Waddell, freshman

"I wrote a five page research paper in 20 minutes for my econ final and I got a 95."
—Scott Claggett, sophomore

The Flyer

Salisbury University's Student Voice
Phone: 410-543-6191
Fax: 410-677-5359
flyer@gulls.salisbury.edu
Salisbury University
Salisbury, MD 21801

Vanessa Junkin
Editor in Chief

Adrienne Price
Graphic Design

Leah Cox
Kelly Pahl
Layout

News Editor Diana Dwyer

Editorial Erin Traylor

Gull Life Rachael Stone

Sports Editor Alexis Howard

Advertising Kristen Etzel

Manager

Photography Adrienne Price

Editor

Copy Editor Kelly Mundle

Web Content Jared Kobilinsky

Coordinator

Photographers Erin Corcoran

Preda

Dulyachinda

Matt Goldman

Patrick Hackley

Jackie Holder

Justin Odendhal

Staff Writers Amina Aden

Amanda

Biederman

Patrick Drengwitz

Katie Franklin

Mike Gibb

Jonas M. Gottlieb

Steven Graves

Chelsea Grimm

Pete Hicks

Alexis Johnson

Kristina Letcher

Christopher

MacDonald

Bianca Makle

Corey Sznajder

Ryan White

Editorial Policy: Letters are welcomed and ENCOURAGED. Please include your name and your class. Faculty members, please include your department. Letters should be no longer than 400 words. The Flyer reserves the right to refrain from publishing any text. Deadline for submission is Wed. at 5 p.m. Please e-mail letters to flyer@gulls.salisbury.edu.

Have you seen yourself in The Flyer? Stop by GUC 215 Monday-Thursday 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. with your flashdrive and we'll give you your pictures free of charge!

Good-bye from The Flyer editor in chief

During the past two years, I've learned a lot as editor in chief of The Flyer. I've gained more from The Flyer than I ever could have from a classroom setting.

From filling the spot in the layout after someone doesn't turn in a story to finding solutions to unanswered questions in articles, serving as editor in chief is not an easy job. Attempting to keep people motivated may be the biggest challenge of all.

This year another hardship was added to the everyday struggles of working at The Flyer. Our adviser left before the school year began for another job and we were never provided with a permanent replacement.

After several issues with very little staff support, my former editor in chief, Sarah Lake, served as interim adviser for about two months and implemented new initiatives in an effort to motivate the staff.

However, winter break came around, her contract ended and we no longer had the support of an adviser.

My experience at The Flyer has been extremely stressful—I've given up each Sunday and Monday for the past two academic years in an attempt to perfect the publication, from improving the caliber of story ideas to obsessing over whether the text in one column lines up with the others.

However, I'm certainly taking with me a lot as I move on. Working in this campus newsroom is the best thing I could have done for my journalism career.

I want to be a journalist, and I know I'd never be hired at a publication if I didn't prove myself while in college. CMAT majors who don't write for The Flyer or get involved with another media-based group on campus are wasting their time at SU. Having a 4.0 GPA doesn't do any good without hard evidence to back that up.

This summer, I will be working as an intern at the Carroll County Times in Westminster, and in the fall I will be interning at The Daily Times in Salisbury. After I graduate in December, I'm not worried about finding a job.

I've taken a lot of pride in being The Flyer's editor in chief. It's really become a part of my identity, and though I am looking forward to seeing my stress level decrease, I am partially sad this is my last issue.

I'll miss The Flyer staff, too. We've become a close-knit group this year. Last year I met my boyfriend, Mike Piorunski, at The Flyer. Thank you to Mike and to my mom, Valerie Junkin, for putting up with my endless, frustrated rants. I will never complain about The Flyer again — my last issue is being released today.

Erin Traylor will be taking my place next year, and I've equipped her with a 7,500-word "how-to" guide outlining my job's duties — though those pieces of paper could never do the job justice.

I hope you have enjoyed reading The Flyer over the past few years and I hope you continue to read it in the years to come. I know I'll still be looking for my copy each Tuesday.

Sex toy parties: surprisingly educational

Some expert sex

toy parties to have a raunchy and vulgar atmosphere, however they are largely educational and serve to make people comfortable with their own sexuality.

On campus, sex toy parties have become popular. Having not only attended an event but hosted one as well, I contend that these parties are not as appalling as some think. The personal consultant who hosted my recent sex toy party, Jenna Ryerson, shares her expertise. Contrary to popular belief, they are not just about selling vibrators. Sure, there are vibrators involved, but they also introduce other items to facilitate safer sex and increase a better sense of being.

Take Slumber Bubbles, for instance. Stressed about finals? This pheromone-based bubble bath not only attracts the opposite gender, it boosts serotonin, the neurotransmitter known as the happy hormone. A relaxed mind makes for a happier college student.

Generating at least 200 orgasms a year has many health reimbursements. These include headache relief, and benefits for skin, hair and nails. For those creating orgasms with a partner, lubrication is a must, according to Ryerson. Taking allergy medication or birth control can hinder the creation of natural lube. Without it, women will more likely be susceptible to yeast infections or even worse, tearing something.

Having an adequate lubricant is important, but knowing which to buy is even more important. Sometimes purchasing a pricier item is in your best interest.

So why doesn't the over-the-counter stuff suffice? Ladies, if you value your parts, just like me is a better investment than KY Jelly. KY is actually a surgical product and is toxic to the vagina. And should you splurge for the warming sensations? If you're not ready for children, Ryerson suggests steering clear of the warming lube because the heat acts as an incubator, making it easier to conceive.

Although these factoids seem like an unexpected portion of a typical sex toy party, in actuality all of it is unexpected. These events aren't thrown to mock procreation or encourage promiscuity, instead they promote a comfortable environment to be open about sexuality and to discover more about sex in general.

Sex education is clearly a more effective way to keep kids safe than to preach abstinence. Everyone will come to a point in their lives at which they become curious about sex. To this I say, knowledge is power.

Learn more by consulting "Slumber Parties by Jenna" at www.slumberpartiesbyjennaryerson.com.

Ms. Advice

Broken hearts

A broken heart is an ailment for which there seems to be no cure. Advice and consolation from friends never helps. Many other emotions come from this dreaded state: loneliness, regret and hopes for reconciliation. But every broken-hearted person should remember that everything will be OK. Despite sounding like a sympathy card, remember that time will heal all wounds. In the meantime, here are some tips.

Acknowledge that you are sad. Mourning is necessary to heal. And after you have gotten over the first hump in the road, keep busy. Sitting around pining for someone will set you back.

Look toward friends for support. Warning: don't talk about your feelings too much; the more you think and talk about something, the more power it gains over your life.

Next, get active. Plan activities either for yourself or with friends. When you see the good around you, it reminds you that there is more to life than the one person who hurt you. It is a common misconception that you cannot be happy without a significant other. By believing this supposed fact you will only cause yourself more pain as you try and get through your breakup. We put a lot of stock in what we believe, so remember to replace your bad thoughts with good ones.

While you go through the healing process, there are some things that you should try to avoid doing. Do not occupy yourself with another person. Finding your healing in a stranger or someone you do not have feelings for ends up hurting you, and the other person.

You also should avoid contacting the person you have split up with when you are feeling low. They will not say what you need them to say. Emotions run high after a breakup and bad decisions can be made in the process of trying to communicate.

When intense emotions are involved in a breakup situation, satisfaction is rarely found. It may be hard to accept, but the truth is, we choose how we recover. We can go through the normal phases and emotions to make ourselves better, but we can also drag the mourning out for too long. You do not have to deny how you feel, but you have to choose how to act in order to keep yourself healthy. If we always choose to wallow in our feelings, our broken hearts would never heal.

—The Girl Next Door

Bleeding? Broken? Infected?...or Just Hurts!™

SALISBURY
Immediate Care
& INJURY CENTER

Confidential & Convenient Medical Care

Monday - Saturday: 9 AM to 7 PM & Sunday: 9 AM to 5 PM

OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK • NO APPOINTMENT

Coughs/colds/sore throat	Cuts/lacerations
Bronchitis	Broken/fractured bones
Nausea/vomiting	Sprains/strains
Ear aches	Back pain
Flu symptoms	Sports injuries
Asthma/allergies
STDs/HIV testing
UTI/Kidney infection
GYN concerns
Infections
Meningitis vaccine

410-543-2020

www.sbyimmediatecare.com
MOST INSURANCE ACCEPTED

659 S. Salisbury Blvd., Suite 2
Located in the Salisbury Health Pavilion, across the street from Wawa, on the right, past Giant Supermarket and Walgreens.

We ♥ our customers
And we love to hear from you even more!

facebook.com/thedelicagourmet

twitter.com/thedelionline

search: the deli – casual gourmet

thedelionline.com

Check out daily deals and specials.

Win gift cards.

Sandwich of the Month Contest. Submit yours!

Across from SU, between Monkey Barrel and the new
Last Call Liquors

1147 S Salisbury Blvd, Salisbury, MD 21801
(443) 736-8313

InsleyRentals.com

Reasonable Rents For Quality Tenants

2,3,4 Bedroom Homes

Walk or Bike
to the University

Washers & Dryers
Included

Students Welcome

Contact Our Office
TODAY for a Viewing

227 E. Main Street
Salisbury, Maryland 21801
410-742-8121
info@insleyrentals.com

ERIC DAVIS

property management

200 E. Church Street, Salisbury, MD 21801

410-546-5019

www.ericdavisonline.com

Phone: (410) 546-5019
Contact Mary Anne Johnson
Property Manager
for all your off-campus housing needs!

We specialize in student housing!
Call us today!

rentals@ericdavisonline.com
www.ericdavisonline.com

Contact
The Flyer!

Facebook Page:
Salisbury
Flyer

Fan Page:
The Flyer

Twitter:
@suflyer

Blog:
suflyerblog.
blogspot.com

Text:
646-535-6397

SALISBURY SPORTS CALENDAR

Tuesday - 5/10	Wednesday - 5/11	Thursday - 5/12	Friday - 5/13	Saturday - 5/14	Sunday - 5/15	Monday - 5/16
	3 p.m. Women's Lacrosse vs. Rowan (NCAA First Round)	2 p.m. Softball vs. Farmingdale (NCAA Regional)	TBD: Softball (NCAA Re- gional)	TBA: Women's Lacrosse (NCAA Regionals)	TBA: Women's Lacrosse (NCAA Regional Final)	TBD: Softball (NCAA Regional)
		3:30 p.m.: Baseball vs. Montclair State		TBD: Men's Lacrosse (NCAA Second Round)	TBD: Softball (NCAA Re- gional)
				TBD: Softball (NCAA Regional)		